Our last staycation was an absolute disaster. We went to a travel agency to make a hotel, and the agent suggested a beachside hotel that had views and emerald water. However that was not the case. The pictures in the were absolutely misleading, to say the least We expected a neat and clean hotel with crystal clear pools and a sea overview. Imagine our shock when we realized that the hotel was far away from the beach and had an old and filthy swimming pool. On top of that, we found a couple of cockroaches and bugs in the room. When we asked for another room, we were given a room with a broken AC, which was fixed only on the last day of our stay.
Moreover, the restaurant was supposed to be five stars, but I can honestly that I have had better food in motorway service stations. The food was served cold with little to no diversity during our entire stay. The Italian cuisine that we were assured was nowhere to be found. Apart from that, we were charged for breakfast, while we asked and paid for an plan.
To make matters worse, the service was and nothing like what was described in the brochure. The "professional custom service experts" turned out to be careless and even rude workers.
The level of and negligence in that hotel was definitely "unprecedented". We were really looking forward to having the staycation of our dreams, but it was nothing but a Space tourism actually began in 2001, though in a very restricted and elitist form. The first civilian to go to space was American businessman Dennis Tito, who paid $20 million for his flight to ISS on a Russian Soyuz spacecraft, followed by six other adventurous and rich entrepreneurs visiting between 2002 and 2009. Russia has put a hold on tourist flights and has not reinstated them yet; though to be fair, shelling out $20-40 million for a life experience cannot be called tourism yet. Stargazing, however, is a popular space tourism pastime for many. There are many parts of the world that are renowned for their stargazing potential. These are usually remote areas, where the light pollution is reduced, enabling maximum visibility. Some popular stargazing destinations have capitalized on the tourist market by organizing stargazing tours or stargazing-focused accommodation options, such as bubble hotels. Unlike tents and cabins, these transparent bubbles offer unobstructed views of the night sky and surrounding landscapes.

The Maldives, a collection of more than a thousand islands in the Indian Ocean, (know) is known for its clear emerald water, breathtaking beaches, and (luxury) luxurious overwater bungalows. With features like these, the archipelago makes for an idyllic sanctuary where guests can snorkel, scuba dive, swim, and savor some truly unforgettable sunsets. Aside from (be) being one of the (stunning) most stunning island getaways in the world, the Maldives is also a perfect addition to an itinerary for travelers visiting magnificent South Asian cities or Middle Eastern capitals.

In the Maldives, most resorts (situate) are situated on their own private islands. In fact, one island, one resort is the typical approach for hotels within the archipelago. This makes sense (geography) geographically, considering the Maldives is home to at least 1,192 uninhabited and 200 inhabited islands. Whether you tour multiple islands by staying at (many) more than one resort over the course of your vacation, or you charter a boat, or take a day tour to an adjacent atoll, make sure to island-hop while (visit) visiting the destination.
